At S-Senate

Resolution discussed

In a special meeting Wednesday night, the Student Senate passed a resolution to support in principle the establishment of an experimental college at CMU.

The resolution was introduced by Charles Robertson, Western Islands senator, as last Monday's meeting and the special meeting was set up to discuss Robertson's proposals.

Robertson also presented other resolutions which outlined the structure of the experimental college and which Student Senate adopted as a possible method of implementing this proposal.

Each course would be concentrated in one month's time, with the student attending class approximately 10 hours per week. Students could be evaluated other than by test grades, according to Robertson.

The method of grading, Robertson told Senate, could be agreed upon by both the student and instructor. It could be determined by a paper, video-tape, movie, audio-tape or anything which could give the student insight into the subject.

Most of the ideas for Robertson's proposed experimental college have come from curriculums at other schools. Robertson foresees that it would be possible for such a curriculum to be instituted for every course.

Robertson wants the proposal to be presented to University Senate for their ideas and help in setting up such a college.

Although the experimental college idea has been proposed, it would take at least another two to three years to be implemented, according to Robertson.

Hearing attended by senate members

Six members of Student Government recently attended a public hearing in Lansing on student opinion, organized by the Special Committee on the Total Citizen Participation Student Bill of Rights.

Four of the six CMU students spoke at the hearing which was held in the Chambers of the House of Representatives last Friday.

Rick Kedzierski, student body president-elect, spoke on the feasibility of a student being appointed to the board trustees.

Larry Fredendall, chairman of the Student Senate Curriculum Committee, spoke at a hearing on student involvement in academic reform and departmental decisions.

The 18-year-old vote and more student involvement in the college town districts was discussed by Bob Kellogg, Rochester senior.

Charles Robertson, Western Islands senator, spoke on the general aspect of student rights and the student role in the university.

The goal of the hearing, according to a letter sent to the student body president by Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, was to "find out exactly what the youth of Michigan feel about issues through the testimony of high school and college student leaders."

All the high schools, colleges and universities in Michigan were contacted and asked to send representatives to the hearing.

The other two students who attended the hearing were Tim Hruska, Student Senate president pro tem, and Sue Greshman, Tecumseh junior.
